

Greetings nieces and nephews,

Now that many of you have started the next generation of our family trees it seems to be a good time to pass along what is known about your ancestors. In this packet you will find a lot of names and families going back as far as 9 or 10 generations. There's enough information to construct a family tree picture if you want to. There are lots of gaps in what we know the further back in time you look. And there are probably mistakes, too.

What's missing:

- This packet does not go into details about cousin relationships.
- Most of the details about your spouses' ancestors are missing. As unofficial archivist for the Urban-O'Brien family my first point of reference is my parents. I have been gathering details about their roots and branches which is what you'll find here. (I'm happy to add details about the families that you all married into but as of this writing I have recorded very little about them.)
- Research Notes – I have lots of notes describing where I got this information. Obviously, some of it I know firsthand, but I also have old family bibles and voice recordings of some individual recollections. I also did a lot of research on Ancestry.com.

About the report format:

- Place names are generally reported as City, County, State, Country. It's a bit awkward to read and may seem to include redundant information but it will help you find and match official records should you decide to do your own research.
- The numbering scheme may seem a bit unusual, but it is a 'standard' format for ancestry reports. It is referred to as Ahnentafel – a German word that literally translates as "ancestor table".
 - Either you or your oldest child is Individual 1 in Generation 1. Direct ancestors of Individual 1 will have a number at the left edge of the page. When you see numbers indented, it indicates that that person is a direct ancestor referred to earlier in the report. This can be really helpful when you realize that parents often name their children after themselves or other family members and you're trying to figure out who's who.
 - Except for the first person in the report, males are all reported as even numbers and females as odd numbers. A father's number is twice (2x) the child's number, their mother is $2x + 1$. (Siblings are listed but not numbered in this report.)

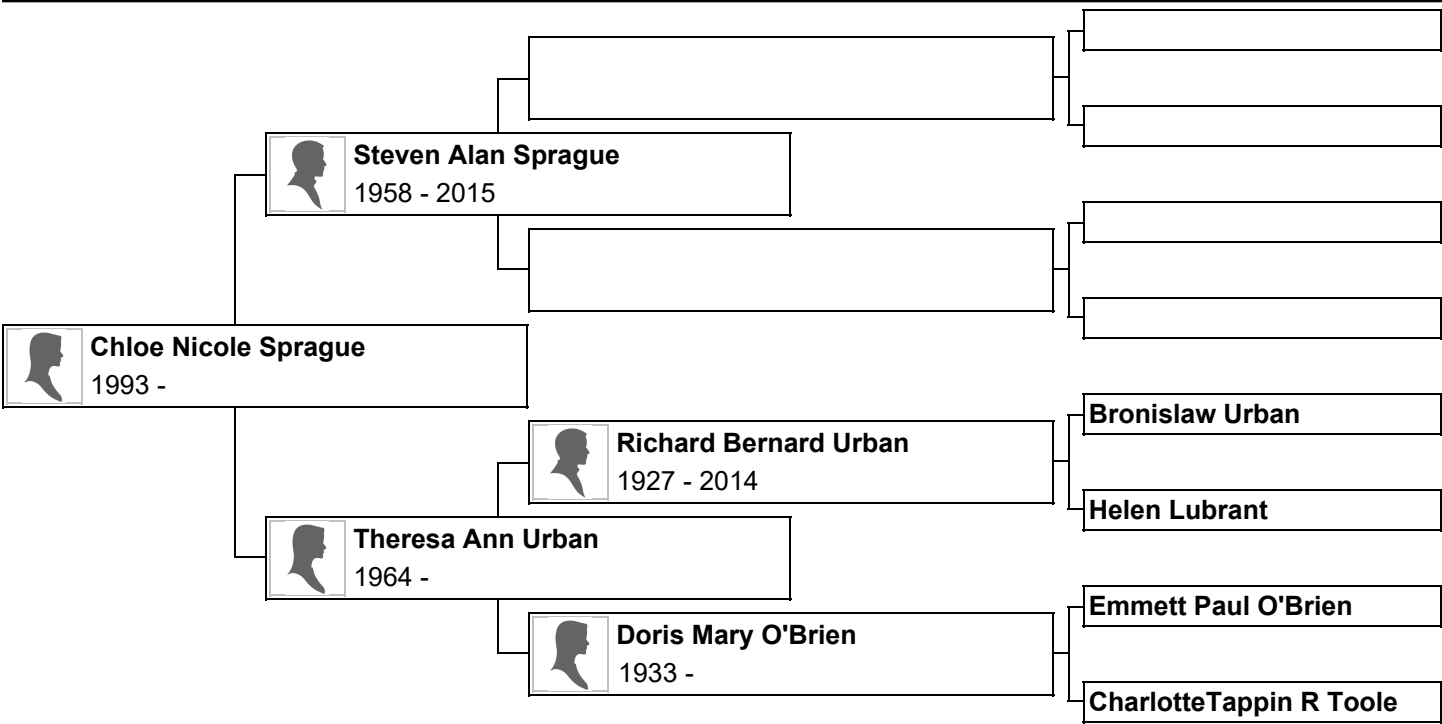

For example, if your mother is shown as individual #5, her father is #10 and her mother is #11. Her grandfathers are #20 and #22, grandmothers are #21 and #23
- It's highly repetitive. The paragraphs of any individual are first shown as a direct ancestor. That paragraph will be repeated in its entirety when they are listed as a child of the previous generation.

Enjoy!

Your Uncle Rick
